

NATIONALS JOLT YANKEES AGAIN---CENTRAL CARNIVAL ON TAP TODAY

GRIFFS' EARLY LEAD UPSETS
LATE ATTACKS OF YANKEES

By VANN NESS.

Nationally speaking, yesterday's baseball game was as successful as necessary, inasmuch as six runs can win a game when New York gets only five.

But Washington had a close hair-cut. The stiffs were all but kicked from the underside. Griff's men had been walking on air with a five run lead, cleaned up in the first and second, when the Yanks sneaked up on Bill Snyder and Erickson and made a wicked swing of the leg, almost upsetting the home guard.

In the Yanks' seventh the tying run was nervously hopping off third base, but it never showed. The scenery could not have been set prettier for Babe Ruth to Marconi a four-base wallop which would bring in that much sought even-up—but Babe failed. His infield bouncer went Harris to Judge, and Ruth continued running to right field, suddenly interested in finding his glove. Peckinbaugh, on third by his own timely triple, had arrived too late to score, though his drive had brought in Ward.

Snyder Blows.
Bill Snyder pitched first-class goods until the seventh when the Manhattan bunch started their bunt game. Four hits had been his degree of generosity in six innings. But in the hoodoo seventh, Pratt started trouble with a single. Bodie picked his way into another single and Hofmann, batting for Ruel, walked, making the bases even with the brim.

Erickson went in for relief and O'Doul, batting for Thormahlen, struck out. This was the first sign of hope for those of the wretched nerves in the paddock, and Erick received an appreciative yell.

That yell had hardly pulled in its echoes when Ward slammed out his second triple and the runs came padding homeward. When Erick had once more established normal circulation, Peckinbaugh stepped up and spiked another three-bagger, again making the bases even with the general theme of the Yanks' convention, but Stan Harris nabbed his short fly and Ruth flivvered, Harris to Judge.

Friday seems a bad day for Ruth—a walk accounted for his only arrival at first. But for Joe Judge, boys, turn up a Friday as often as you please. Joe was only at bat five times yesterday and only poked out four singles and a double. It was largely a case of Judge sitting in on the jury at yesterday's trial.

Rice's Great Catch.
But the real issue of the game came up between Rice and Ward during the final inning. The Yanks had offered Vick in place of Quinn for a sacrifice, and Vick cooked well with Erick as fireman. The fanned and Ward came up. The third baseman had already driven out two triples and he didn't appear any weaker.

He sent a high one out to right center, a healthy bid for another three-bagger, but Rice caught it over his shoulder and Ward made the second out. Erick sent Peckinbaugh to first with four wide ones and Pipp shouldered his best stick. He slapped a mean one out to Roth and the ball must have grown musty, it sunk so slowly. But just before it made its landing, Roth stuck out his glove and ended the game.

Washington scored its half dozen

SAM HYMAN'S WING
AND BAT DEFEATS
WEST VIRGINIA U.

Sam Hyman in the box and Sam Hyman at the bat and wearing a Georgetown uniform, defeated the highly touted West Virginia University nine on the Hilltop field yesterday by a 6 to 1 score.

Hyman started the game by retiring the side on strikeouts, and repeated this same dose in the second and the fourth innings. But one visitor drew a base on balls and this came in the ninth inning after the Blue and Gray pitcher had forced two men to fan the offense.

Score by innings:

The SPORTLIGHT
by Grantland Rice

Let the coward stop and whine
Where the skulking host the line,
While the valiant seeks to live
With the best he has to give,
Where this epithet awaits
Out beyond the Sunset Gates—
"Fate could toss him to the pit."
Fate could never make him quit.

There are many who are experts at "panning the other guy," but after all it is not as good a job nor as clean a job as being an expert at swabbing out sewers.

Freak Episodes.
With the season opening April 4, what price could you have got that a ball club composed of Ty Cobb, Heinemann, Veach, Bush, Flagstead, Young, Leonard and others would not win a ball game until May had begun to drift along?

It was an astounding sight to observe the dazed Tigers day by day grubbing in vain for one lone victory out of a carload of running starts. It was merely one of those things

EASTERN TRIBE IS EASY FOR KRUPP
CENTRAL'S HURLER

Another good baseball game was played in the scholastic championship series yesterday when Central High scored a victory over the Eastern High team, by a 7-to-3 count.

Krupp had the Easterners guessing from the first inning until the last opponent was down. He struck out twenty-one of the twenty-seven men that faced him.

O'Connor, for the Capitol Hill lads, pitched fine ball until the fifth inning when Central's charges bombarded his plans for a total of three runs.
